Niantic Bay Boardwalk Reconstruction Progress Report

by R.S. De Santo, President - East Lyme Public Trust Foundation, Inc.

Eight months after Amtrak began replacement of the Niantic River Railroad Bridge, its two 12 hour, 6-7 day per week work shifts have resulted in remarkable progress. The Amtrak cross section drawing on the bottom of this page shows track alignment and its relationship to the Overlook Walkway as it will appear in the spring of 2013. This cross section is located at Project Station 71 + 00, approximately opposite the east end of the Niantic River Transmission Garage on Route 156. Its characteristics illustrated here are "typical" and will be the same all along the new sea wall up to the new stone groin being built parallel to the Niantic River.

Photographed on December 14, 2010, an ACELA on its way to Boston, runs by the Overlook Park sea wall. The new walkway will be constructed along the top of the sea wall.

Erosion protection and revetment riprap placed along the foot of the sea wall will protect the Overlook and its embankment from storm damage. Riprap stones as large of 7,000 pounds shown here, will form the armor.

These stones will be brought by barge from the Tilcon Quarry in North Branford, Connecticut, then unloaded to a temporary dock at the groin and moved from there to be placed at the foot of the sea wall by trucks, one of which is pictured here.
