Progress Report:

East Lyme's Overlook Park

by R.S. De Santo, East Lyme Public Trust Foundation, Inc.

The photograph above was taken at 12:19 pm on April 21, 2011, when the tide in Niantic Bay was predicted to be high at 1:31 pm. It shows the growing accumulation of sand along the beach, caught there by the groin constructed to offload barges of materials used for the Amtrak Niantic River Bridge replacement. The groin traps sand that drifts from west to east along the coastline.

In fact, since April 15, 2011, 577 concrete sheet piles were used along the beach to construct a sea wall that will support the new Overlook walkway. Due to hydraulic excavation for each pile, nearly five cubic yards of sand washed into the adjacent intertidal area. Therefore, a total of 2,735 cubic yards of sand was added to the intertidal zone.

The groin began trapping sand on October 29, 2010, when the first steel sheet piles were driven around the footprint of the groin. The photograph here was taken 174 days later and it clearly shows the Growing New Beach, which will continue expanding to a maximum area of about 8.9 acres as compared with the existing beach of about 2.1 acres.

Once construction of the bridge, railroad, and Overlook Park is completed, the present 230 foot long groin will have been replaced by a stone groin/fishing pier. Work will include placing 76,000 cubic yards of sand and 400 cubic yards of cobbles along the new beach to give its natural growth a "kick start."
